Appreciation of different asset classes

Due to its limited supply and the ever-increasing need, the demand for land has only enhanced over a period of time. However, this continuous demand has ensured that the price of land hasn't experienced volatile changes as have other assets, such as gold and equity.

The above trend clearly depicts that among all the viable investment options, plots have a steady rise across the years. Stocks and mutual funds may have a sudden rise during some years but were non-resilient against sharp market downturns. Land is appealing because it is a tangible, non-depreciating, time tested asset class that can be controlled. Hence, it augurs well towards diversification of existing portfolios.
